

At the Bus Stop

“Hurry up, Freja! Erik! You must hurry!” The siblings’ mother was impatient. You will have to eat a Snackerdoodle Breakfast Bar on your walk to the bus stop (product placement).

The twins rushed from their house, eating their breakfast bars and jumping over the cracks in the sidewalk, which they believed would break their mother’s back.

But when they got to the bus stop, they noticed that their bus had already passed by and was several blocks away. “Freya! You were too Slow!”

“You knucklehead, Erik! You shouldn’t have taken so long choosing your breakfast bar flavor!”

“But I prefer the muesli flavor! You know that!”

Finally, the kids settled down after Freja reminded her brother of their SEL lesson, “Flipping Your Lid,” and effectively used her fist as an visual Example.

However, instead of going home, they decided to skip school and went to the movie house, where they snuck in through a back door and watched, “Sisu.” It was inappropriately violent, so they went home crying and their mother sent them to bed with no supper.

CUT AND PASTE YOUR EMOJI CHAIN BELOW:

WRITE A SINGLE SENTENCE THAT DESCRIBES WHAT YOUR EMOJI CHAIN MEANS
