

The Video Game

Omar awoke early on Saturday and immediately opened his laptop and logged into his favorite game, "Armageddon 3: Take No Prisoners." "Don't forget to use the bathroom!!" his father reminded him. Omar hated these distractions. But he got up and flushed the toilet so that his father thought he was doing what he was told. Then he returned to his game.

He was busy not taking prisoners, when he noticed another button on the screen that said, "Don't Press this!" Omar sat back thoughtfully, but then decided to press the button. Immediately, he felt strange, and saw that his hands were disappearing into dust. Before he could scream, he found that he had been transported into his video game. "AAAAAHHHH!" he screamed, but then a hand clasped over his mouth. He looked up and saw his favorite Armageddon character, Ranger Jake Jawbone.

"SHHH!" Jake said, and held his finger to his lips. "We need to take out some bad guys," he whispered. "Are you with me?" Omar nodded and followed Jake onto the battle field. The two were successful not taking prisoners all afternoon, but then Jake said, "Listen, kid. You need to go. Your parents are looking for you." He handed Omar his own set of dog tags, and Omar quickly felt himself dissolving. Then he was back at home in his bed. "Omar! Where are you?" he heard his mother yell.

"Up here, Mom!!" Omar wondered if it was all a dream, but then he opened his clenched fist, and found the dog tags. He smiled and realized that he would never forget his big adventure.
